A State with Wide Open Spaces...By HMS WarspiteThe DeLorme Arizona Atlas and

Gazetteer is an excellent resource for trip planning. Arizona is a deceptively big state with lots of wide open spaces and some specially rugged terrain, including the Grand Canyon. This atlas should allow the average traveler to navigate pretty much anywhere on the road network, and to gain some appreciation for the terrain along the way. The scale of the map is 1:260,000, which is reasonably useful for the size of the state. Major roads are identified, and many minor roads are at least visible on the map. The multicolored presentation enhances the terrain relief. The map sheets are marked with latitude and longitude for GPS grids. In addition to a locational gazetteer, this Delorme Atlas provides general information on recreational opportunities. The listings include federal and state parks, game management areas for hunting, and locations suitable for fishing. There is a handy listing of campgrounds and one map devoted to the Grand Canyon, a major visitor attraction. The map scale is not suitable for off-road navigation. Those travelers planning to do off-road route finding are advised to consult more detailed products. The DeLorme Arizona Atlas and Gazetteer is very highly recommended for planning and navigating, whether for business or pleasure, around Arizona.

This has enough detail, that you can see all the twists and turns on mountain roads. I wish I would have had this before we took HW191 up through AZ. I bought one for my brother also. And will be getting another for my son when he moves to Davis Montham AFB this summer.
