The perfect solutionBy RussFinding new careers is becoming the norm since people have become a line item on the corporate spreadsheetand downsizing in order to stay within budgets is a common practice. Realizing that job stability is not a given, one must prepare for the eventuality of having to find a new job. Finding a new job is difficult to do when bills are due and the pressure is on. Donna's book is the perfect solution and goes one better...rather than just provide direction for finding a job this book provides a framework for changing a life. I work with military servicemembers who are leaving active service and this is precisely what I want to deliver for the transitioning veterans. Explaining to people that they need to decide what they want to do is not helpful. Providing them with a framework and guidance that helps them assess their assets, gather information, analyze options, identify opportunities and make decisions IS helpful! This book is a well crafted tool that does just that! It is also filled with real life examples of people who have successfully transitioned to fulfilling careers. I highly recommend it!0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Very helpful tool for people that want moreBy JRI recently found myself in the unfortunate position of being in a job I hated. The situation felt hopeless and my confidence was shot. Donna Rippley's book challenged me to reevaluate what I offer and what I wanted out of a career. What I found surprised me. It lead me in a direction that I had never considered before. Now, I'm in a new field that I enjoy with a much brighter future.What I enjoyed about his book is that it forced me to think constructively about my situation. It allows the reader to come to their own conclusions, so they can find the best fit for themselves. This quality makes it a valuable tool to everyone, regardless of their educational or career background.The other powerful part of this book was the inclusion of personal stories of other people going through the same thing I was. Each one had a lesson and provided hope. It felt reassuring to know other people had gone through the same thing and were better off for it.If you are out of work or just over your current career, this is definitely a book worth checking out.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. From the Author One of the features of I Want A NEW CAREER...Now, What Do I Do? is inspiring stories of people who have made successful career transitions. It was a delightful experience to gather these stories of inspiring and insightful career changers. Let me begin by sharing my career transition story with you: Career Transition Snapshot - Donna Rippley

From: Educator To: Founder of Center for Career Transition

I began my career as a kindergarten teacher. Loved it! But then a series of mini-reinventions followed. As a teacher, I started helping interns launch into the world of teaching and grow confident and excited in their new role. Loved that! Still later in my career, I was the supervisor of a program for low-income children and led a staff of fifteen educators. After working as a college instructor and public school administrator it dawned on me that a common thread in my reinvention path was always being in a role where I worked with adults. But the path only meandered through the education world. Then one day I was reading the book Quiet Leadership and got to the back cover and noted the information about author David Rock. He was the CEO of Results Coaching Systems, a leading global coaching organization based on neuroscience. His work also included a certified coach training program. That's all it took. It was time to move from mini-reinventions in the world of education to a true NEW CAREER. I was off to New York for training and I haven't looked back since. After becoming a coach and living through my own reinvention, I realized that was my special calling, career transition. I loved creating retreats with great settings that support people in stepping back and finding their true calling through a designed, reflective process. Speaking engagements, teleseminars, and one-on-one coaching are also a rewarding part of my coaching career. I truly do love helping people figure out who they want to be in this world. That's my career transition story. With the inspiration and Five Step Process for Career Transition in I Want a NEW CAREER...Now What Do I Do? you can write your very own career transition story and then live it!

If you are: considering a career change looking for an encore career just graduating from college but unsure of your career path looking to find a career that fulfills your calling...your story awaits you! Enjoy the journey. Donna
