0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Buy this book BEFORE you have an accident and have to deal with an insurance company. By George Grenley Statistically speaking, most of us will never be in a serious car accident in our lives. However, we buy insurance anyway. "Injured Money" should be part of your insurance purchase, so order a copy now. If you or a loved one are in a serious accident, car or otherwise, you will need to have this book at hand. It describes what to do at the scene, what to do within the first 24 hours, and perhaps more importantly what NOT to do. Other reviewers have described the struggles they've had with insurance companies. Personally, I've been lucky so far, but I'm glad I have Dan's book. By Karen Most of the book can be summed up as 1) Don't talk to the insurance companies, 2) Get a lawyer if you are badly injured. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five Stars By Dmoore A good book for anyone that is facing issues with your insurance company

If you buy insurance, drive a car, ride in a car, ride a bike or walk on roads where cars drive, this book is a must read. Exceptionally different than the books written by attorneys, this book is written by an injured person who recovered more than a quarter-million dollars. Based on a true story, the author takes you through the events immediately following an accident all the way to settling multiple insurance claims and a lawsuit. At every step along the way, there is a clear description of the pitfalls to avoid so that you too can maximize the money you receive.

"If you drive a car, ride in a car, or walk on roads where cars drive, this book is a must read." Amy Bach, Insurance Consumer Advocate, Co-Founder, United Policyholders "Injured Money is a remarkable book based on the author's first hand account of a serious accident in which he suffered painful life altering injuries and details his battle with lawyers, doctors, insurance adjusters to recover a very substantial amount of money. This book is an invaluable tool full of insight." Thomas Huppuch, Attorney About the Author Dan has been a CEO or Vice President for high-technology companies for the last 20 years. While working as a Senior Vice President of Marketing and Sales for a Silicon Valley company, Dan was seriously injured while commuting to work on a bicycle. After dealing with trying to get insurance companies to pay his significant medical bills, or to settle a claim so Dan could pay the medical bills, he became intimately aware of both the serious dysfunction of the insurance industry, as well as the complexity of insurance claims and lawsuits. Knowing that the complexity of fighting claims has the effect of intimidating consumers who are victims of insurance companies, Dan decided to apply his technology marketing and sales experience to the benefit of insurance consumers. Just like consumers of technology, consumers of insurance need easy-to-understand, complete guides to what they own, how it works and what to do when it doesn't work. Dan now lives in New Hampshire with his family. Dan's vocation is as a marketing and sales consultant to technology companies. His avocation is as a writer and advocate for owners of insurance.
