Romand Coles : Rethinking Generosity: Critical Theory and the Politics of Caritas (Contestations) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Rethinking Generosity: Critical Theory and the Politics of Caritas (Contestations):

Romand Coles explores how we might understand and motivate generosity in a world in which no theological or secular position can claim absolute privilege for itself. He argues that unless our generosity is fashioned in the context of a radical receptivity, we tend to undermine our best aspirations. In the agonistic dialogic character of human beings, Coles argues, is a practice of receptive generosity, an openness to the specific being and voices of others, and a concern to give them something of value. Ethical relations between people should be animated by receptive generosity, he suggests, but they are always fallible and rarely free of a tragic aspect that calls us critically to renew our efforts.
